Tin Cairns again

MOVE over Western Areas. Another great Queensland junior resources mob is soaring skyward.

Exploration company Auzex Resources has just pumped out results that indicate the potential for the discovery of a "world-class tin deposit" at its Khartoum project near Cairns in North Queensland. At least according to the company.

Auzex chairman John Lawton said assessment of results had proved compelling. But the last time we heard about tin and Cairns was a mob called Norminco which came to nothing.

In contrast, Auzex shares yesterday leapt 16¢ to close at $1.09, a far cry from its record low of 60¢.
